

Causality

- The relationship between cause and effect (result). In system dynamics, there are two types of causality: positive and negative.
- Positive causality means a result element changes to the same direction as its cause element changes to.

Types

- When seeking to establish a causal relationship, researchers distinguish among three levels of causation:
- Absolute Causality, Conditional Causality, and Contributory Causality.